Barnett Implement Mount Vernon Parts Guys

Have you ever wondered who these guys are that stand behind the parts counter at our local Deere dealer, who greet us with a smile and listen politely about our latest two cylinder Deere problem. The guys that work for minutes pouring through old worn parts books to find the parts number for that old Deere that was built before they were born and then go online to determine if the part is available and then the big shocker, the price! I am sure our Deere parts guys could write a book on how many responses customers give them on parts prices. Well, let's learn some background about these patient and courteous guys who help us solve our worn out parts problems.

Dave Moores is the parts manager and admits that he bleeds "green". Dave first started at Barnett's stocking the parts shelves when he was eight years old. Dave's dad Arnie was parts man at the time and Dave was allowed some early exposure to the parts business. Dave first started as an employee for Barnett's at the Snohomish store in 1987 and transferred to Mount Vernon in 1997 when his dad retired. Dave admits that it's the only job he has ever had and he really enjoys it! The obvious big change he has seen is the advent of computers in the parts business. It used to be a job where you looked up the part in a parts book then checked the shelf for availability and then checked another book for the price. All invoices were written by hand. Dave says his dad retired a little early because he knew the computers were going to be the future and he didn't want to go through all the learning close to his retirement age. Now days its only our 2 cylinder tractor parts that require the parts books. Every thing else is on line. Another change is the training required for new tractor models. The old training required the parts person to attend a class somewhere else in the region. Now there is the school called John Deere University online where you get your "new model qualification". This is done right at the Deere store.

Dave really enjoyed the old John Deere Days which Barnett's has dropped several years ago. He viewed this as a customer appreciation day and a good reason to get the shop and store cleaned up! Nothing like visitors to get your house in order!

Dave's fear for the future is that Deere's marketing plans may lose personal contact with the local dealerships and community. He is also concerned about the price surge in Deere two cylinder tractor parts.

What can the two cylinder tractor collect do to make the parts guy's job easier? Well, Dave says that most of us have a pretty good handle on the parts needed and what he needs is the tractor model and serial number. If the tractor was purchased at Barnett's, there is a good chance he has that information on file.

Mike Taylor would be the senior member of the parts department with 32 years working parts for Barnett's. Mike

Separating the Chaff from the Grain*Winter Technical Reading

The John Deere Moldboard Tractor Plow 1914 to 1960 The Two-Cylinder Era by David Wolfe is worth reading if you have an interest in Deere plows.

The author has pulled together a history of the John Deere plow from 1837 to the end of the two cylinder era in 1960. He gives good descriptions and pictures of the many Deere moldboard plows made during the 20th century. He includes a section on hitch types for various plows and an explanation of adjustments. He also covers tips on restoration, painting and decals. The book is full of fascinating antique John Deere plow sales literature and photos of collector's implements. If you have a John Deere plow that you can't identify, this is the book for you! I don't know of any other source that has more information on Deere plows.

The book is available through Amazon.com or the author at BEDA Company, N 301011 Church Hill Road, Arcadia, WI 54612-8298

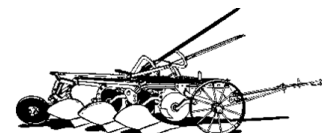

Mr. Wolf also has a video on plow set up and another book on plows. He also manufactures some plow handle parts.

How to Keep Your Classic Tractor Alive by Spencer Yost. Copyright 2009 has a deceiving title. True, it has a good section on tractor maintenance and overhaul but Yost covers much additional information for the tractor collector.

The book is full of great tips that even the most experienced collector would appreciate. He covers topics such as buying the tractor, transporting equipment, safety, hitches & implements, using tractors on a small farm or business, shop equipment and design. He also gives some good recommendations on prepping and painting the tractor. His philosophy of tractor repair recognizes that some owners want a good operational classic tractor and others want a beautiful tractor to display. He also discusses using the tractor on the small farm with the variety of implements available today.

Any collector or classic tractor owner could save a lot of money by reading this book! It is available through Two Cylinder Magazine or Amazon.com.

No, neither of these two books are available on your Kindle yet!

started in parts with Lynnwood Equipment Company while attending school to earn his airframe - power plant mechanics certification and pilot licenses. Lynnwood Equipment Company specialized in logging, paving and rock crusher equipment. After four years with Lynnwood Equipment Company Mike moved on to Barnett Implement. Mike didn't grow up on a farm but his grandfather farmed asparagus and grapes in Sunnyside, Washington. He worked with Jerry Reuble for six years on a crop and dairy farm so he understands that end of the agriculture business. Mike sees farm machinery becoming much more complex with computers controlling functions and diagnostic equipment. The array of sensors and related equipment can be challenging!

Some of the more enjoyable features of the job is the people that he works with, the customers and the employers. The little children that used to run around the store are now the farm owners with family's of their own.

What can the collector do to make the parts person's job easier? Model and serial number is important and the casting number can be helpful. Mike's job is a little unusual in that he is technically 50 % parts and 50% information technology or computer guy. His business card reads focus person and parts. Back in the 1990's when computers started appearing in the store Mike took an interest in computer diagnostics. Now he is the in house "go to guy" when computers, servers and other things related need problem solving. One of the new things Mike is looking forward to is the Integrated Distance Training (IDT) room. This will be a new training room at Barnett's where employees will get training online with a 52" flat screen, computers and camera allowing the students and teacher to interact with other dealerships in the region or country. Each site will have a facilitator and Mike will be that guy in Mount Vernon. This will really save money in travel time and allow better education on the next new Deere thing!

Barnett Implement Mount Vernon Parts guys will continue in the Spring issue with Steve Cruse and Lyle Archer. ajohnson
